

Snow Leopard

Olivia H

A Snow leopard is a type of Animal. A Snow leopards live in the snow. Enjoy reading facts about Snow leopards!

Fun Facts

Fortunately, you can help WWF-Canada protect them. Did you know that as few as 4,000 snow leopards remain in the wild? Snow leopards are often called the "ghosts of the mountains" because they are so rarely seen and spend most of their lives in solitude.

Diet

Snow leopards are predators which means they eat other animals. The diet varies across snow leopard range. Across their range snow leopard also take small prey including marmots and hares, and they hunt larger birds like snow coots and chukar

These are some pictures of snow leopards

Their Habitats

Snow leopards are found in the high mountains of Asia. A WWF study recorded snow leopards living at the highest altitude ever documented for big cats 5,859 metres above sea height as Canada's highest mountain.

What they look like

Their fur on their stomachs is nearly five inches thick to help them survive in cold, harsh mountain climates. Their thick, massive tails, which shield them from the harsh weather and help maintain balance, are almost as long as their entire body.